Hey.

Anyone out there have any of the 'old school' 80's anime like "Dougram: Fang in the Sun" or "Starship Troopers"?

Just curious.

Sorry Matt, I think my oldest is Fushigi Yuugi, and I think that is from the early 90s. But it is hands down, my favorite Anime out there. It beats a lot of the new stuff pretty bad.

well i havent seen that old anime but i did see when i was a kid, that vampire hunter show back in 85.

in speaking off this topic, does anyone have the American version of street fighter and darkstalkers on dvd? these were epic classics that took japan like 3 years to think off it before america has to stop the series due to cheesiness. so what did japan did, redo the animation and made the story line a little better and made the show part 2. what did japan leave out? of coarse who made the anime series first and that would be america.

Just had to mention:

I find it amusing that a book by an American author (Robert A Heinlein) spawned an anime - "Starship Troopers".

--the anime did a good job matching the book

The anime lead to the movie.

--the movie did a horrible job matching either

Which has lead to "revised" copies of the book being released.... copies that more closely follow the movie than the original book.

As far as what old anime I have... I would have to break the VHS tapes out of storage to find out - but it won't be much.

The oldest I have is Akazukin Cha Cha from back in the early 90's. It was never released outside of Asia, though (I have it in Chinese), which is really disappointing because it is as much a part of my childhood as Speed Racer and Sailor Moon. :\;

They should show Samaruai Pizza Cats. I used to watch that show back in the early 90s when I was a kid, before I knew what anime was.

I find the mention of Darkstalkers really ironic; I was in a Hastings earlier today looking for Anime rentals and I spotted what I think is the 90s American version of the show on DVD, but just to rent. There were no copies to buy, unfortunately.

I'll see if I can rent it the next time I go! Not sure if I can record it, but at least out of curiosity I can see if it's really the one you're looking for.
